WEDNESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 4.

A DILIGENT WOMAN. -Some wise mar, who thinketh he knoweth much about the fair sex, discourses as follows concerning the diligent woman : She riseth in the morning betimes, and as the lark singeth to his mate, so she maketh a joyful noise in all the house.

She maketh up her bed, and beateth the pillows thereof, and, like as an eagle, stirreth up her nest, so she stirreth up the feathers and spreadeth out the sheets, and layeth the blankets apart.

She clotheth her family with pure garments. and, her husband is made comely when he sitteth among the chief men or walketh in the market places.

She kneadeth up her dough, and baketh a goodly cake for her household. She provideth her dinner in due season, and supper faileth not when the good man returneth, at the end of the day, weary with his labors and the strife of man.

She looketh well to the ways of her household, and seometh the idle woman with her delicate hands, who lieth in bed and calleth a Bervant.

The Paris Charivari has a design, which some married people will understand. At the Exhibition a balloon daily makes ascents to about half a mile, being, however, connected to terra firma by a rope. Pleasure parties are thus enabled to take a bird's-eye view of Paris end the Parisians. Charivari represents a husband rushing, with a seissors in his hands, demanding of the assistant who is paying out the rope to the ascending balloon, and offering a thousand francs to be allowed to cut the rope, as his wife is among the aerial passengers!
